

TRUCKSTOP PREACHERS

Hailing from Rock Hill, SC, Truckstop Preachers successfully recreates country elements that country rebels such as Buck Owens, Merle Haggard, and Johnny Cash used to find their fame. By taking a hard-driving approach to traditional honky tonk, these guys keep the audience filling up their beer instead of crying in it. The band plays versions of Bakersfield and Traditional country music along with their own hardcore country influenced songs. Their unique blend of country, trucking, and rockabilly styles is never pretentious or distorted, but instead delivered in a clear retrospective fashion. An explosive stage act unfolds as soon as the curtain rises on this crew of well seasoned performers. With a mixture of talent and charisma, Truckstop Preachers always leave an audience craving more!

NATHAN PALMER is the lead singer for the group. His baritone voice resembles that of Johnny Cash and Junior Brown. Influences span from Ernest Tubb to Antiseen. Nathan's stage presence always leaves fans wondering what he will do next.

JEFF FAULKNER and his remarkable bass riffs fill out the bottom end for the band. His walking bass lines emulate the western swing style of yesterday. Buck Owens and Mike Watt are just a couple of his favorites.

GLENN JONES is the rhythm guitar player for the band. He also lends to the vocal harmonies and an occasional banjo break when needed. Glenn's musical influences include Wayne Hancock and New Grass Revival.

LEE GOODWIN takes care of the lead guitar licks for the group. His graceful harmonies and lead breaks keep the songs tasteful and innovative. His hot picking is influenced by a wide range of players, from Don Rich to Joe Perry. Lee's experience and talent lends professionalism to the band.

MIKE ELDER and his lean tattooed arms handle the drums for this crew. His stripped down drum kit keeps the music at its truest form. Mike's talent derives from a punk influence with a touch of rockabilly.
